Cupid Rules All.

To the Editor:

If two make love's unity
No charm of numbered years will do,
For Cupid mates our deatiny—
The rogue could never count past two!

Strong man, before his lingering heart, To train the bower of roses twined. A working week of springs should statt, So love's warm nest will shelter find.

His nature needs the laboring years
To harmonize his wilder will,
To that soft music of the spheres
Sweet woman wakes in Eden still.

seventh year the Sabbath of rest. The seventh year jubilee.

Jacob obtained a multiplicity of wives by serving seven years.

In the human body the figure seven plays an important part.

With our twofeet we walk, with our two hands we toil for our life-mate, with our two-hands we toil for our life-mate, with our two-hands we see her in her youthful charms when she is twenty and we are twenty-seven. We gaze with admiration and love on the beautiful, bright being before us. Our tongue is loosened and we pour forth in cloquent strains the story of our love. It is an old story, as old as the human race on this earth, but its new to every generation and will be until the end of time.

There are exceptions to all rules. I hold that in early lite a man should be at least seven years older than his wife.
